

The Public Health Film Society presents

PUBLIC HEALTH
FILM FESTIVAL
2016

11- 13th November

#PHFF2016

In partnership with

Welcome to the second international Public Health Film Festival brought to you by the Public Health Film Society (PHFS).

What is the Public Health Film Society?

The PHFS is a UK registered charity (number 1160590) established in 2015.

We believe that films have the power to change the way people view their own health, the health of their society, and how the health of the world affects us all.

We work to bring together people from many different backgrounds, to encourage them to share their knowledge, skills, and experience, and be inspired through the medium of film to work towards overcoming the public health challenges we all face.

For more information please visit our website at www.publichealthfilms.org or email us at publichealthfilmsociety@gmail.com.

What is the Public Health Film Festival?

The Public Health Film Festival is for people who love films and people who make films about health issues.

This year with our partners at Public Health England (PHE) and The Oxford Research Centre in the Humanities (TORCH) we are proud to bring you a great selection of films about health, guests from the arts and sciences, and workshops on health films. We encourage you to join the debates about health issues raised in the films and share your knowledge skills, and experience of working in health films. This year alongside the curated films we are also hosting screenings from the first ever International Public Health Film Competition.

We hope you enjoy this year's festival and please do take a little time to tell us what you think by completing the evaluation form at the end of this brochure.
